- The exhibit explores how the John Brown Monument, the community's fight to keep the Akron Children's Zoo in the neighborhood and a longstanding custard stand at the park's edge were ways for Black residents to affirm community and make an enduring mark on the city during times of extraordinary change in the 20th century.
- A panel discussion will be hosted on Presidents' Day for the public to learn more about the shared history. Panels will include community members, local historians and other guests.
